Nicosia, Cyprus (AP) - Fighting continued in northern a resolution aimed at enlarging the role of the U.N. Cyprus Thursday despite the peacekeeping force on Cyprus. latest cease-fire, and Ankara The Soviet Union vetoed a revealed plans for projects in similar resolution Wednesday Turkish strongholds indicating it night, but merely abstained intends to stay on the island for

The resolution authorizes Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim to evaluate the role prescribed for the decade-old U.N. peacekeeping force on Cyprus by the cease-fire and disengagement agreement reached Tuesday in Geneva by Turkey, Greece and Britain.

The accord calls for the U.N. force to supervise withdrawals of foreign forces from the island and set up buffer zones around enclaves held by Turkey's invasion force.

Waldheim told the Security Council his representative in Cyprus had reached an agreement with the Turks to allow U.N. troops to stay in Turkishcontrolled areas. Waldheim said earlier this week that the United Nations could not police the cease-fire without agreement from both sides, and the Turkish commander had demanded that U.N. soldiers evacuate the Turkish areas.

In Athens, Premier Constantine Caramanlis took a firm grip on the armed forces, scrapping the present constitution and reinstating the 1952 charter giving a civilian defense minister power over the military.

U.N. To Re-Evaluate Its Role

Turkish Energy Minister Cahit Kayra disclosed that his government plans soon to build a 15megawatt gas turbine electric plant in the Kyrenia area, to go into operation in one or two months. Kyrenia is a seaport about 10 miles north of Nicosia and 45 miles south of mainland Turkey. It was the focal point of the July 20 Turkish invasion and is where Turkey's main force now is headquartered.

Kayra also said Turkey is building facilities for storing fuel on Cyprus and that it has started modernizing port facilities at Tasucu on the southern coast of Turkey facing Cyprus, to help supply its forces on the island.

Artillery, mortar and tank fire reverberated off the sheer rock cliffs of the Kyrenia mountains on Cyprus.

Maj. Atilla Erden, one of the staff officers at Turkish headquarters in Boghaz, said the Greek Cypriots' use of U.N. uniforms was "the reason why we have had to take certain precautionary measures against the U.N. peacekeeping force."

The city Personnel Board was unable to reach a majority decision Thursday on how much wage increases city workers should receive Sept. 1.

With two members absent, the advisory panel voted 2-1 to recommend City Council adoption of a pay ordinance which calls for a 71/2% cost-of-living increase. It takes three votes to constitute a decision.

The board's action will be referred to city lawmakers, who will hold a public hearing Monday on the 71/2% wage proposal.

Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf now is recommending that all city workers receive the 71/2% raise. Earlier this summer, however, he recommended a 5% increase for regular City Hall workers and a 71/2% increase for police and firefighters.

Inflation Spiral

The administration's pay package came under fire from City Employe Association (CEA) members who called for a 10% cost-of-living increase to match spiraling inflation. CEA members noted that the consumer price index is up 12.58%.

Pension Plan Change The one fringe benefit considered the most important by CEA members has not been proposed for this year - a change in the city's pension plans.

For the past two years CEA has called for the equalization of the city's contribution to the pension plan. For example, the city puts in $1.10 for every dollar regular City Hall workers contribute. But, for every dollar Lincoln Electric System workers stash away, the city puts in $2.

Personnel board members noted that many city workers will be granted 5% merit raises, resulting in a total wage increase of 12"4.".

CEA Vice President Gary Kitt pointed out that many workers have reached the highest step on the job classification scale and are eligible for only a 21/2% increase, not 5%.

As the Legislature's budget chairman, Marvel has repeatedly clashed with the governor over the size and from of the state budget.

Opponents said the administration proposals would have prevented publication of stories about the My Lai massacres C5A cost overruns and the Pentagon papers. In the extreme, opponents argue, even un-

The drive for a shield law was inspired by a 1972 Supreme Court ruling that the First Amendment does not provide newsmen absolute protection against disclosure of confidential information

In the Senate, the bill lies idle because of disagreement on when, or if at all, a journalist can be

The Official Secrets Act and the proposed changes in the Espionage Act are part of a proposal for extensive revision of the federal criminal code. In the House, the code revisions are bottled up in a Judiciary subcommittee, sidetracked by the full committee's inquiry into whether President Nixon should be impeached. A Senate Judiciary subcommittee headed by Sen.

John L. McClellan, D-Ark., has nearly completed hearings on the proposed criminal code revision. Unlikely To Advance

But the panel's chief counsel says that the current political atmosphere makes it unlikely that the bill will go to the Senate floor.

"The climate is not right," says committee counsel Paul C. Summitt. "It's not the time to expose such sections as wiretapping and national security" to Senate debate.

"The tendency is to be overreactive," he said. "We need a lot of study and judgment, not overreaction," he said.

The Nixon administration proposed the criminal code revisions nearly two years ago and said the Secrets Act and Espionage Act revisions were necessary to plug security leaks. News Would Be Limited

Opponents said the administration proposals would have prevented publication of stories about the My Lai massacres, C5A cost overruns and the Pentagon papers.

In the extreme, opponents argue, even unauthorized possession of routine reports and documents could lead to prosecution.

Reps. Robert Kastenmeier, D-Wis., a member of the House Judiciary subcommittee which will consider the proposal, doubts the Secrets Act and Espionage Act revisions will survive.

"There will be nothing affecting a free press in that bill," he said. "The subcommittee will not approve a bill with provisions for criminal penalties for disclosure of information." The drive for a shield law was inspired by a 1972

Supreme Court ruling that the First Amendment does not provide newsmen absolute protection against disclosure of confidential information. Kastenmeier is chairman of a subcommittee which reported a bill in February for consideration providing that no newsman could be required to disclose information at any pretrial proceeding, including grand juries. The bill had the support of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Point Disputed

In the Senate, the bill lies idle because of disagreement on when, or if at all, a journalist can be required to testify.

The administration contends that shield legislation is unnecessary and that the media can do an effective job within the limits of the Supreme

Others seek an absolute shield with newsmen completely immune to involuntary court appearances. Other factions want a limited shield with some mandatory obligations or no congressional action at all, on the theory that any bill offers an opportunity to curb the powers of the press. Opinion within the news profession is

"It's unlikely we will have a bill of any sort this year because of disagreement among the ranks, including the press itself," says Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., a leading proponent of such legislation. "If we get a bad bill, I'll be among those voting against it."

Washington (UPI) - The House Appropriations Committee Thursday approved an $83.3 billion Pentagon money bill for 1975, about $9.2 billion more than the previous year. The committee action, which cut the ad-

Review Of School Records

Washington (AP) - With little notice, Congress has approved a bill to give parents the right to inspect, challenge and protect school records on their children.

The authority, applying to all schools receiving federal funds, is detailed in the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974, a section of the omnibus education bill now on President Nixon's desk awaiting his signature.

The right of parents to inspect the records of their children at first was rejected by the House and approved by the Senate. But the House reversed its position Wednesday when it approved the final compromise version of the education bill.

The measure provides that no federal funds shall be made available under any federal education program to any educational institution or agency that: -Denies parents the right to inspect and review any and all official records, files and other information about their children, including all the material placed in the pupil's cumulative record folder. -Allows the release without the parents' written consent of any records or files in which the identity of the child or the parent is easily recognizable, except for certain specific educational purposes spelled out in

The measure also gives parents the opportunity for a hearing to correct or remove inaccurate, misleading or "inappropriate data."

The bill specifically applies the provisions to colleges and other institutions of higher education, as well as the elementary and secondary schools to which other parts of the bill apply.

Rep. William A. Steiger, R-Wis., said the act "represents the first step toward providing much needed protection of the right of privacy of school children and their

The measure was introduced in the Senate by Sen. James Buckley, Con-R-N.Y., with the backing of the American Civil Liberties Union.

The inspection authority was prompted by increasing parent hostility to largely experimental federal-state teaching programs that include lengthy personal questionnaires about a pupil's home life, racial and sexual attitudes and relationships with others in various stress

Stern wrote about his unorthodox method of educating Edith in a book, "The Making of a Genius." Basically, the method is a concentrated tutorial experience which starts the child on a learning process from birth. He believes that the environment - not heredity and race determines intelligence.

As an infant, Edith heard classical music 24 hours a day, engendering nobility, according to Stern. She began to read at age 2 and by 5 she had finished the Encyclopedia Brittanica. She skipped through two classes a year in school and then dropped out in the ninth grade to study at home with her father.

A number of college and secondary education administrators and teachers have praised Stern's work. Others disagree with him.

Among his Head Start proposals - including some of the more basic ones used in the education of his daughter - he recommended that Head Start enroll children at the earliest age possible, that classical music be used extensively in the reliance on field trips.

He quarrels with other noted educators and psychologists who call such "compensatory education" schemes a failure. And he heartily recommends that the program be enlarged and more finely attuned to the type of underprivileged children it is meant to serve.

Stern says Head Start provides the underprivileged with wholesome food, expert medical care, proper clothing and an educational impetus which enriches him culturally, fosters his socioemotional development and improves his motor ability and dexterity in an atmosphere

You Can Rule Nation

As individuals, the American people often lose sight of the tremendous power they wield collectively. Alone, their impact may be small but collectively, they can accomplish fantastic results.

Nothing demonstrates this better than the present petroleum situation, one that has gone from scarcity to plenty in a brief tew months. There are many reasons for this, but one prominent reason is the price of gasoline.

It has gotten, even, to the point where there are rumors of price wars among service stations, a situation that is largely denied by the industry but which appears to be on the brink of reality.

Gasoline supplies in storage are at high levels and many big wholesalers are now pushing their retail outlets to get the stuff sold. The currently high price of gasoline is, by all indications, on shaky ground.

All this has come about because of the simple fact that the American people have not been buying gasoline as they once did. Consumption today is at 1973 levels, despite a higher rate of automobile ownership today than a year ago and despite the precedent of regular annual increases in consumer demand.

If this trend would continue, there is little doubt that the price of gasoline would decline, although it would not likely return to pre-shortage figures.

What has happened in the area of petroleum could happen elsewhere in the economy. Nothing has a greater impact upon the price of goods and services than a good letting alone by the consumers.

There is speculation that Detroit may be failing to recognize this in announcing new car price increases for 1975 models. The increases, in the $300-to-$500 range, are staggering the imagination of prospective buyers.

Having contended in 1974 with a gasoline shortage, the major auto-maker in 1975 may be jolted by widespread refusal on the part of Americans to pay the higher price on new models.

The lesson to be learned is that the economic discipline urged upon individuals by President Nixon is not just an empty gesture. The American people have and ought to use great power over prices in the

Another Stumbling Block

The city's neighborhood redevelopment effort apparently has been stymied momentarily, at least, by the insistence by some City Council members that more "professional planning" be involved in the Community Development Director Leo Scherer has proposed a $122,925 budget for Phase I of the Clinton neighborhood redevelopment program, which is aimed at paving streets, stepping up code enforcement and adding more city services. A good start, in our opinion. Scherer notes that members of the Clinton Neighborhood Organization participated in the development of the plan.

But approval of Scherer's proposed budget for Clinton area redevelopment will be held up pending further council study of the plan.

Two council members, Bob Sikyta and Helen Boosalis, indicated they had expected a more comprehensive plan than the one proposed. Echoing their charges of inadequacy, Councilman Steve Cook said he has been "frustrated with this whole affair for the last nine months. I don't think the answer is paving a bunch of streets out there." Cook added, "Their (city-neighborhood spokesmen) plan may not be worth a damn fig" since professional planning was not more involved.

You have to start somewhere and Phase I, formulated after a number of neighborhood meetings with resident input, it seems to us is a good, defensible plan. It is apparently something that a majority of Clinton area residents want and in that regard, Councilman John Robinson's statement that "You (council) can't sit up here and dictate what they (neighborhood residents) want just because you may have more expertise and knowledge" can be appreciated. There must come a time when a city and its different areas can be studied, planned and consulted to death.

We think the city has the existing resources and personnel to more than adequately plan and implement a neighborhood redevelopment program. If more advice from the city planning department is needed in putting together the later phases of this and other neighborhood redevelopment plans, we're confident that the Community Development Department won't ignore that need. But it seems to us to be rather senseless to threaten Phase I of Clinton neighborhood redevelopment at this time because of what no doubt will be While it may be that the city could an on-going planning policy disagreement.

DST, Speed Limit At Issue

Much to the dismay of the 15 Midwest governors meeting in Minneapolis earlier this week, federal energy chief John Sawhill stuck to his guns over the issue of year-round Daylight Savings Time.

The governors passed a unanimous resolution asking the federal government to abandon Daylight Savings during the winter months. But Sawhill defended the year-round approach, estimating that it cut the nation's fuel usage by .5% last winter. There is, of course, considerable room for doubting that estimate. We're of the opinion that the inconvenience and safety factors far outweigh the minimal, if any, energy savings, and that the nation should revert to standard time during the winter

Also cause for dismay — this time with motorists on the receiving end — was the general position regarding the maximum nationwide speed limit. Sawhill and many of the governors favor keeping the 55 m.p.h. limit because of what they regard as its fuel and life-saving benefits.

because we think that the lower speed plus that other elements enter into the question and we don't think that it has been proven that a 55 m.p.h. limit is that much safer than, say, 60 m.p.h.

The present lower maximum may be reasonable for state and county roads because of design and conditions, but it is not reasonable for Interstate Highway travel and the government should be doing something about raising the maximum speeds on the Interstate system to at least 60 m p.h.

ANTHONY LEWIS

WASHINGTON - In what it did not do, as in what it did, the House Judiciary Committee conveyed a reassuring sense of constitutional order. Even those most critical of the secret Cambodian bombing and of the President's tax returns may have found reason in the debates to accept that those wrongs were not proper grounds for impeachment.

On Cambodia, the decisive argument was made succinctly by Rep. John Seiberling of Ohio. He detested the war and the bombing, Seiberling said; Kent State was in his district. But "we should not use our impeachment power" when "other presidents have taken the same sort of action and . . . Congress bears a very deep measure of responsibility."

Many members felt that Nixon had set "a very sorry example" in his tax returns, as Wiley Mayne of Iowa put it. But the prevailing view was expressed by Ray Thornton of Arkansas: "This committee is not a tax court or a criminal court." Its duty was to deal with offenses "affecting the security of our system of government."

In rejecting those two articles, therefore, the committee was giving further content to the majestic phrase, "high crimes and misdemeanors." The offense must be the particular responsibility of the President accused. And it must rise above the level of common wrongdoing: must be, as Hamilton Fish Jr. of New York said, "an offense against the political process or the constitutional system of our country."

In the search for standards, members returned often to the clause of the Constitution requiring the President to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed." The point of the "take care" clause, as they saw it, was that it imposed an affirmative duty - a duty breached if a president condoned or was indifferent to the corrupting lawlessness of his subor-

Thus William Cohen of Maine said he had voted for Richard Nixon as "the best man to lead this country." But he would vote for impeachment, Cohen said,

A Watchman In The Night 'Sir, He Says He Has An Appointment'

because the President had "by act or acquiescence allowed the rule of law and the Constitution to slip under the boots of indifference and arrogance and abuse.'

None of us who watched the 38 members of the committee wrestle with evidence and conscience and political loyalties over six nights and days will soon forget them. They did their job, on both sides, with much passion but little rancor. Again and again they brought old principles to life in new words. They taught us.

Paul Sarbanes of Maryland brought home the significance of a break-in at a psychiatrist's office to get the files on one of his patients. "I ask every doctor and lawyer and every insurance agent and accountant in this country," Sarbanes said:

Lawrence Hogan of Maryland, a former FBI agent who had been a solid Nixon supporter, spoke about the anti-war protesters who a few years ago used violence "because they felt their cause was just. They felt that they were above the law. Most of them had long hair and beards and dressed as noncomformists . . .

"Inside the White House at the same time," Hogan continued, there were other men with "well-tailored business suits, close-cropped hair . . ., flag pins in their lapels . . . They felt that because their cause was just, they too were above the law. And for several months we have had a chronicle of all (their) illegalities

James Mann of South Carolina also spoke of accountability. "Americans revere their president," he said, "and rightly they should . . . We would strive to strengthen and protect the presidency. But if there be no accountability, another president will feel free to do as he chooses. The next time there may be no watchman in the night."

Mann quoted Thomas Paine: "Those who expect to reap the blessings of freedom must, like men, undergo the fatigue of supporting it." By its deliberations the Judiciary Committee renewed confidence that Congress accepts that burden. But will Congress accept a restored responsibility in government generally? Walter Flowers of Alabama made that point. "I agree that Congress should exert itself," he said. "That is what we are doing here. But we will and should be judged by our willingness to share in the many hard choices that must be made for our nation, such as allocation of scarce resources . . . I want my friends to know that I will be around to remind them when some of these hard choices are up, and we will be able to judge then how responsible we can be with our newly found congressional power."

Lincoln, Neb. This is in response to a letter by Mr. Robert Colin in the July 13th edition of the Lincoln Star.

I would agree with Mr. Colin that there are many people who are utterly confused about the subject of Wilderness Park - what it is, where it is, and in what manner it is being threatened. It is too bad that Mr. Colin didn't choose to enlighten them.

From his description of a breakfast in the park, one can only admire the skill with which Mr. Colin picked out all the unpleasant memories about his visits to the park including cockleburs and the beautiful musk thistle, the noxious weeds which form a minute part of the diverse plant community of Wilderness Park.

Although admittedly ignorant of the original purpose involved in setting aside the land which comprises the park, I'm not sure I see the point that Mr. Colin is trying to make by the mention of this information. The fact remains that the area is presently a park, and the fact that the land was procured for purposes of flood control shouldn't make anyone feel differently about its merits as a park.

Although I suspect Mr. Colin's suggestion of renaming the park "Salt Creek Slough Park" was not to be taken seriously, he is nevertheless defeating the point he was trying to make by using a name which is more misleading than the original name of Wilderness Park. True. Wilderness Park is not "wilderness" in the strict sense of the word. On the other hand, the park is not a slough in the loosest sense of the word. I know of not more than two isolated areas covering no more than two acres which would fit a description of "slough," which is a low-lying swampy or boggy area. The only correct description of the park would be "Floodplain Forest." This gives no implication of wilderness quality or outstanding unpleasant attributes. It does give a concase description of the area in terms of a plant community and the general topography. Therefore, the most appropriate name for the park would be "Floodplain Forest Park."

Since Mr. Colin admits that many people are still confused about the park and the plans for the bypass, then he should also realize that in December of 1973, they were even more confused, and to a large degree ununformed about the park and the proposed bypass plans. How can we expect confused or uninformed people to appear at a hearing supporting or opposing something they know nothing about? Since that time there has been much publicity on the matter and explanations from all viewpoints have been carried by the media. Now, at this time, with the public at least somewhat more aware of the issue, we want to see if there is sufficient opposition to warrant a new

This letter will concur right down the line with the one written by Mrs. Dondlinger, with the three small children, from Hastings, who went from there to Chicago on Amtrak. We boarded Amtrak at Lincoln at 2:10 a m., over an hour late. We couldn't believe how rough the ride was. There were times when we were crawling along at five to 10 miles an hour. In fact, there were times when we came to a dead halt out in the middle of nowhere, for what reason we could not ascertain. The drinking water was hot and there were times when there was none and none in the washrooms to brush teeth, flush stools, etc. They had no food for lunch time because they were so late getting into Chicago They weren't even supposed to be out there on the tracks. We were over three hours late getting into Chicago and there was no time to get anything to eat. We had to get in line for the train to North Philadelphia.

The train was shaking so much that it v.as worth one's life to get to the diner in the first place and to keep coffee in the cup even if it were filled only one-third full in the second place. We are not young people and it was a real chore to get from one car

One young man said it was just like a roller-coaster. We agreed with him except one expects it on a roller-coaster but not on the highly touted Amtrak. One never knew when we would be leaving the tracks and landing heaven knows where.

We were late getting to Philadelphia, so our next train had gone on and we had to wait for the next commuter train. When it came, there was standing room only, and hot! Our son had waited at the station for hours and had finally gone home. We had been fortunate in that the cars we were in were airconditioned. A lot of them weren't.

When it was time to start home, we arrived in North Philadelphia on time but the train to Chicago was an hour and 10 minutes late. We had to wait in Chicago for several hours, which we expected and didn't mind. When we boarded the train for Lincoln, we were in a hot car and it was pretty miserable. There was no cold water. We were nine cars away from the diner and anyone who had the fortitude to go through three cars found that that was clearly enough. Surely not many tried to go through nine cars to get something to eat. We would say that the food was very good if one could get to it.

The porter promised to awaken us when we got to Lincoln. but we weren't taking his word for it and we knew when we got to the station. No one came to help us or to show us where to get off We went one way through about three cars and could not find any place to get off. We then went the other way and finally, after three cars the other way, we got off. The porter was standing there, very nonchalant, just as though he was completely innocent. My husband told him what we thought about his concern for us.

If anyone is considering taking a trip on Amtrak, he should really look into it again. There were supposed to be two sleepers when they started from New York, but there was only one and all the people who had bought sleeper tickets were crowded into that one.

We waited for two months for our reservations and we got into the seats reserved for us only twice, or one-half the time often lose sight of the tremendous power they wield collectively. Alone, their impact may be small but collectively, they can accomplish fantastic results.

We hope this letter will be a warning to anyone even thinking of going on Amtrak.

Nothing demonstrates this better than the present petroleum situation, one that has gone from scarcity to plenty in a brief few months. There are many reasons for this, but one prominent reason is the price

It has gotten, even, to the point where there are rumors of price wars among service stations, a situation that is largely denied by the industry but which appears to be on the brink of reality.

Gasoline supplies in storage are at high levels and many big wholesalers are now pushing their retail outlets to get the stuff sold. The currently high price of gasoline is, by all indications, on shaky ground.

All this has come about because of the simple fact that the American people have not been buying gasoline as they once did. Consumption today is at 1973 levels, despite a higher rate of automobile ownership today than a year ago and

As individuals, the American people despite the precedent of regular annual increases in consumer demand.

If this trend would continue, there is little doubt that the price of gasoline would decline, although it would not likely return to pre-shortage figures.

What has happened in the area of petroleum could happen elsewhere in the economy. Nothing has a greater impact upon the price of goods and services than a good letting alone by the consumers.

There is speculation that Detroit may be failing to recognize this in announcing new car price increases for 1975 models. The increases, in the $300-to-$500 range, are staggering the imagination of prospective buyers.

Having contended in 1974 with a gasoline shortage, the major auto-maker in 1975 may be jolted by widespread refusal on the part of Americans to pay the higher price on new models.

The lesson to be learned is that the economic discipline urged upon individuals by President Nixon is not just an empty gesture. The American people have and ought to use great power over prices in the market place.

Another Stumbling Block

The city's neighborhood redevelopment effort apparently has been stymied momentarily, at least, by the insistence by some City Council members that more "professional planning" be involved in the process.

Community Development Director Leo Scherer has proposed a $122,925 budget for Phase I of the Clinton neighborhood redevelopment program, which is aimed at paving streets, stepping up code enforcement and adding more city services. A good start, in our opinion. Scherer notes that members of the Clinton Neighborhood Organization participated in the development of the plan.

But approval of Scherer's proposed budget for Clinton area redevelopment will be held up pending further council study of the plan.

Two council members, Bob Sikyta and Helen Boosalis, indicated they had expected a more comprehensive plan than the one proposed. Echoing their charges of inadequacy, Councilman Steve Cook said he has been "frustrated with this whole affair for the last nine months. I don't think the answer is paving a bunch of streets out there." Cook added, "Their (cityneighborhood spokesmen) plan may not be ning was not more involved.

You have to start somewhere and Phase I, formulated after a number of neighborhood meetings with resident input, it seems to us is a good, defensible plan. It is apparently something that a majority of Clinton area residents want and in that regard, Councilman John Robinson's statement that "You (council) can't sit up here and dictate what they (neighborhood residents) want just because you may have more expertise and knowledge" can be appreciated. There must come a time when a city and its different areas can be studied, planned and consulted to death.

We think the city has the existing resources and personnel to more than adequately plan and implement a neighborhood redevelopment program. If more advice from the city planning department is needed in putting together the later phases of this and other neighborhood redevelopment plans, we're confident that the Community Development Department won't ignore that need. But it seems to us to be rather senseless to threaten Phase I worth a damn fig" since professional plan- of Clinton neighborhood redevelopment at this time because of what no doubt will be While it may be that the city could an on-going planning policy disagreement.

DST, Speed Limit At Issue

Much to the dismay of the 15 Midwest governors meeting in Minneapolis earlier this week, federal energy chief John Sawhill stuck to his guns over the issue of year-round Daylight Savings Time.

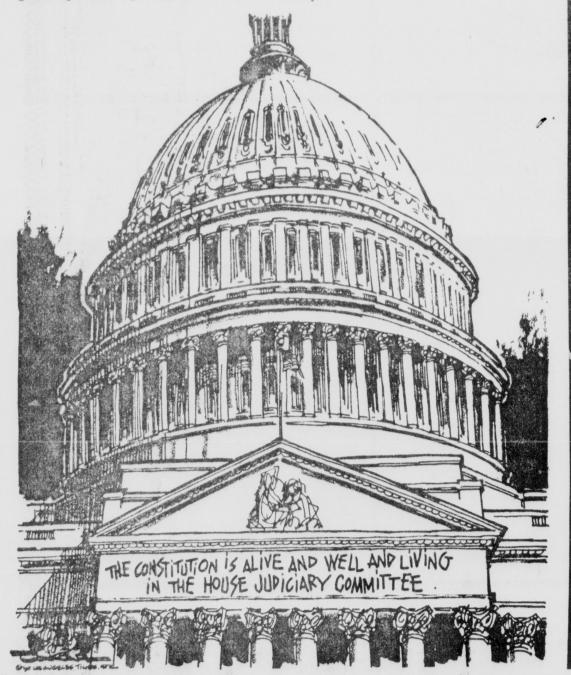

The governors passed a unanimous resolution asking the federal government to abandon Daylight Savings during the winter months. But Sawhill defended the vear-round approach, estimating that it cut the nation's fuel usage by .5% last winter. There is, of course, considerable room for doubting that estimate. We're of the opinion that the inconvenience and safety factors far outweigh the minimal, if any, energy savings, and that the nation should revert to standard time during the winter months...

Also cause for dismay — this time with motorists on the receiving end — was the general position regarding the maximum nationwide speed limit. Sawhill and many of the governors favor keeping the 55 m.p.h. limit because of what they regard as its fuel and life-saving benefits.

We'll not argue abut fuel consumption, because we think that the lower speed plus other factors have resulted in a fuel savings. As for safety, we think there is a correlation between higher speeds and increased traffic deaths, but we think also that other elements enter into the question and we don't think that it has been proven that a 55 m.p.h. limit is that much safer than, say, 60 m.p.h.

The present lower maximum may be reasonable for state and county roads because of design and conditions, but it is not reasonable for Interstate Highway travel and the government should be doing something about raising the maximum speeds on the Interstate system to at least

But "we should not use our impeachment power" when "other presidents have taken the same sort of action and . . . Congress bears a very deep measure of responsibility."

Many members felt that Nixon had set "a very sorry example" in his tax returns, as Wiley Mayne of Iowa put it. But the prevailing view was expressed by Ray Thornton of Arkansas: "This committee is not a tax court or a criminal court." Its duty was to deal with offenses "affecting the security of our system of

In the search for standards, members returned often to the clause of the Constitution requiring the President to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed." The point of the "take care" clause, as they saw it, was that it imposed an affirmative duty — a duty breached if a president condoned or was indifferent to the corrupting lawlessness of his subor-

Pupil Self-Concepts Get School Attention

By DICK HOLMAN Star Staff Writer Seven-year-old Ned had a terrible time at breakfast.

He'd left his room a mess, and the night before, he hadn't locked up his bike or taken out the garbage. Ned's dad grumbled, his mom yelled and his sister needled him.

His teacher a few hours later couldn't figure out why the usuallybright Ned scored poorly on his math test, or why he grounched at his schoolmates.

"Kids that don't feel very well about themselves can't do very well in math," says Dr. John P. Dudley, who directs the Lincoln Public Schools' programs for the gifted.

He says that while schools have stressed children's performance, they have done relatively little to determine how students feel about school; and even less to help students determine how they feel about themselves.

First Such Program

Dudley is switching positions this fall to conduct the first comprehensive program he knows of in America to develop students' personal and social growth.

As yet unnamed, the program is concerned "not just with student attitudes and behavior," Dudley said in an interview. "We're trying to put together some kind of a model that really deals with how kids feel."

Dudley has already run a pilot project in nine schools for children in kindergraten through second

This fall, he'll take his project to K-2 classes in all elementary schools, while conducting another pilot program for third- and fourthgraders in nine schools. In three years, he said he hopes to have the program underway in all kindergartens and grades 1-6.

'Get Turned Off'

If youngsters aren't challenged after they learn basic skills through the third grade, Dudley explained, that's when they can get "turned off" and possibly cause some

He said he's using what he learned working with Lincon's gifted students to "apply to the rest of the kids in the district." Otherwise, he said, "I can't justify the gifted program alone.'

Dudley is completing development of curriculum and tests to determine changes in students' self-concepts. He's devising a "values approach to career education," a method that doesn't tell students what to think, but simply allows them to clarify their own values and set goals in compatible terms.

For example, he explained, a child might say he wants to be a machinist when he grows up, but also say he wants to make $100,000 a year.

"We want to make sure the kinds of things we do aren't detrimental to kids," Dudley said, adding he is appalled by what the nation's school systems generally are doing to children.

"If we fail you in school, you might go away feeling that you're a failure" as well, he said. "We can't do that."

'Not Like Life'

He asserted that "School is not like life. It's not realistic." As a result, students "are trying to tell us some things," for example, "by not showing up for school.'

Dudley is forming "advisory boards" made up completely of elementary pupils who may talk about how they feel. Another aspect of the personal and social growth program will involve parents, who he said "more than ever are concerned about their kids' attitudes and frustrations."

He's using in part the relatively new science of transactional analysis (TA), which allows one to analyze communication and dealings with others. TA is gaining mass popularity partly as a result of Tom Harris' book, "I'm OK - You're OK."

Teachers may learn TA skills in a course Dudley is developing, allowing them to become as competent as they want in stimulating individual students' growth, he said.

Aids Teachers If nothing else works, "That's where TA comes in," he said. It aids teachers in handling situations, such as fights, as well as helping their students understand why they react as they do to certain situations, and to realize what are their feelings as a

Star Staff Writer

Seven-year-old Ned had a terrible time at breakfast.

He'd left his room a mess, and the night before, he hadn't locked up his bike or taken out the garbage. Ned's dad grumbled, his mom yelled and his sister needled him.

His teacher a few hours later couldn't figure out why the usuallybright Ned scored poorly on his math test, or why he grounched at his schoolmates.

"Kids that don't feel very well about themselves can't do very well in math," says Dr. John P. Dudley, who directs the Lincoln Public Schools' programs for the gifted.

He says that while schools have stressed children's performance, they have done relatively little to determine how students feel about school; and even less to help students determine how they feel about themselves.

First Such Program

Dudley is switching positions this fall to conduct the first comprehensive program he knows of in America to develop students' personal and social growth.

As yet unnamed, the program is concerned "not just with student attitudes and behavior," Dudley said in an interview. "We're trying to put together some kind of a model that really deals with how kids feel."

Dudley has already run a pilot project in nine schools for children in kindergraten through second

This fall, he'll take his project to K-2 classes in all elementary schools, while conducting another pilot program for third- and fourthgraders in nine schools. In three years, he said he hopes to have the program underway in all kindergartens and grades 1-6.

'Get Turned Off' If youngsters aren't challenged after they learn basic skills through the third grade, Dudley explained, that's when they can get "turned off" and possibly cause some

He said he's using what he learned working with Lincon's gifted students to "apply to the rest of the kids in the district." Otherwise, he said, "I can't justify the gifted program alone.

Dudley is completing development of curriculum and tests to determine changes in students' self-concepts. He's devising a "values approach to career education," a method that doesn't tell students what to think, but simply allows them to clarify their own values and set goals in compatible terms.

For example, he explained, a child might say he wants to be a machinist when he grows up, but also say he wants to make $100,000 a year.

"We want to make sure the kinds of things we do aren't detrimental to kids." Dudley said, adding he is appalled by what the nation's school systems generally are doing to children.

"If we fail you in school, you might go away feeling that you're a failure" as well, he said. "We can't

'Not Like Life'

He asserted that "School is not like life. It's not realistic." As a result, students "are trying to tell us some things," for example, "by not showing up for school.'

Dudley is forming "advisory boards" made up completely of elementary pupils who may talk about how they feel. Another aspect of the personal and social growth program will involve parents, who he said "more than ever are concerned about their kids' attitudes and frustrations.'

Dr. John Dudley

Teachers may learn TA skills in a course Dudley is developing, allowing them to become as competent as they want in stimulating individual students' growth, he said. Aids Teachers

Some people will disagree with operating a personal and social growth program in the schools, maintaining that it should be left to parents at home, Dudley said.

The public works bill provides federal money for scores of reservoirs, dams and other water projects around the country. It also provides funds for the operation of the AEC and the Tennessee Valley Authority.

In a major departure from the House-passed bill, the Senate agreed to cut off all funding for a controversial dam and reservoir project on the Delaware River between New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

But Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., said the decision to delete some $8.5 million earmarked for the Tocks Island Lake project was not an attempt to kill it but "to bring the matter to a head."

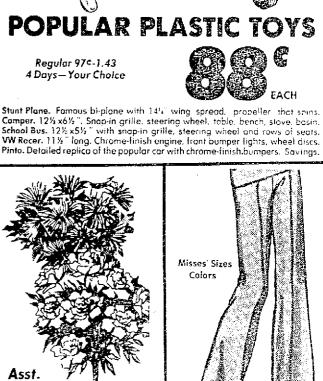

He said that senators who serve on the Senate-House conference committee would push for a moratorium on the project while a one-year environmental study is being conducted.

French Obstetrician Advocates a 'Quiet Birth'

(Editor's Note: A quiet infant at childbirth is generally a cause of alarm. Elaine Genley reports from the Paris Bureau of McGraw-Hill world news on a new medical technique that results in quieter, happier babies.)

Paris - For mothers listening for their infants' first cries in the delivery room, a French obstetrician has some advice - quiet birth is better.

Dr. Frederick Leboyer has developed a method of childbirth that maintains the natural processes with which the child has lived for nine months, as it emerges into the outside world: darkness, silence, contact with the movements of the womb. In doing so, Dr. Leboyer helps the child escape the trauma of violent psychological and environmental change.

Instead of raising the din usually associated with a successful delivery, the baby emerges quiet, wide-eyed and

Preparations for the delivery include a dimly lit room, a bath of warm water, and a staff trained to perform in near silence. When the baby emerges, he is placed, umbilical cord intact, on the mother's stomach. The cord is cut only when breathing has been well established, eliminating the danger of death from lack of oxygen.

The mother massages the baby while it is on her stomach, re-creating the rhythm which has, thus far, been a part of its existence. The baby stays there until its umbilical cord stops beating.

Training for the mothers of non-violent birth is the same as that for the classical method of natural childbirth: courses on the physiology of childbirth and breathing and relaxation exercises. "This doesn't alter childbirth of the woman," he says, "This is for the child. Birth begins when childbirth

France over a period of seven years, is both praised and criticized by colleagues throughout the world. While some obstetricians regard his conclusions as unscientific, a number of psychologists, psychiatrists, and pediatricians are enthusiastic about his concern for the suffering of the child.

When the cord has been cut, the baby is submerged in warm water, so that he can gradually adapt to his new-found weight. The process, repeated several times, becomes a game for the child. After the bath, the child is wrapped in warmed cotton blankets and left, for the first time, to himself.

A new-born baby is an over-sensitive person," Leboyer says. "His cries are proof that the baby is not an object, but a person reacting to his environment." The bright lights of the smoke of an adolescent's first cigarette.

(Of course, he should also be worried that the final contract is not three notrump, which is ice-coid.)

To stake the entire outcome on the location of the diamond honors would be the wrong way of playing the hand. Instead South should try to eliminate the luck element by building up an end position that assures the contract however the diamonds are divided.

He wins the heart with the ace, cashes the ace of spades and ruffs a spade. He then enters dummy with a trump, ruffs another spade, and plays another trump to dummy before ruffing the last spade.

French Obstetrician Advocates a 'Quiet Birth

(Editor's Note: A quiet infant at childbirth is generally a cause of alarm. Elaine Genley reports from the Paris Bureau of McGraw-Hill world news on a new medical technique that results in quieter, happier babies.)

Paris — For mothers listening for their infants' first cries in the delivery room, a French obstetrician has some advice - quiet birth is better.

Dr. Frederick Leboyer has developed a method of childbirth that maintains the natural processes with which the child has lived for nine months, as it emerges into the outside world: darkness, silence, contact with the movements of the womb. In doing so, Dr. Leboyer helps the child escape the trauma of violent psychological and environmental change.

Instead of raising the din usually associated with a successful delivery, the baby emerges quiet, wide-eyed and gurgling.

Preparations for the delivery include a dimly lit room, a bath of warm water, and a staff trained to perform in near silence. When the baby emerges, he is placed, umbilical cord intact, on the mother's stomach. The cord is cut only when breathing has been well established, eliminating the danger of death from lack of oxygen.

The mother massages the baby while it is on her stomach, re-creating the rhythm which has, thus far, been a part of its existence. The baby stays there until its umbilical cord stops beating.

Training for the mothers of non-violent birth is the same as that for the classical method of natural childbirth: courses on the physiology of childbirth and breathing and relaxation says, "This is for the child. Birth begins when childbirth

Though Freud was the first in the western world to form of his method is used.

Leboyer, who has performed 1,000 such childbirths in France over a period of seven years, is both praised and obstetricians regard his conclusions as unscientific, a number of psychologists, psychiatrists, and pediatricians are enthusiastic about his concern for the suffering of the child.

When the cord has been cut, the baby is submerged in warm water, so that he can gradually adapt to his new-found weight. The process, repeated several times, becomes a game for the child. After the bath, the child is wrapped in warmed cotton blankets and left, for the first time, to himself.

A new-born baby is an over-sensitive person," Leboyer says. "His cries are proof that the baby is not an object, but a person reacting to his environment." The bright lights of the operating room burn the baby's eyes, the voices of doctors and nurses intrude on his silence, and before he has adopted to his new, bright, noisy world, he is turned upside down, and his spinal cord is stretched to its limit after being curled up for nine months. Even his first breath of air is like the smoke of an adolescent's first cigarette.

Leboyer's non-violent birth, by contrast, reduces the baby's suffering and provides a friendlier environment for his first moments in a new world.

For the past six months, psychiatrists have conducted studies on children born by Leboyer's painless method, and though more conclusive results will not be ready for at least two years, the children appear to be more stable and better When further tests have been complete, Leboyer is convinced they will prove the children have better memories, heightened intelligence, and keener awareness than children born the old fashioned way.

From the moment North puts the dummy down, South should start worrying about the possibility — if he attempts two | Sizes 363738 39 40 41 42 43 44 46 48 diamond finesses - that he will be defeated if it turns out that West has both missing honors. (Of course, he should also be worried that the final contract is not three notrump, which is ice-cold.)

To stake the entire outcome on the location of the diamond honors would be the wrong way of playing the hand. Instead South should try to eliminate the luck element by building up an end position that assures the contract however the diamonds are divided.

He wins the heart with the ace, cashes the ace of spades and ruffs a spade. He then enters dummy with a trump, ruffs another spade, and plays another trump to dummy before ruffing the last spade.

The contract is now certain. The defenders are at South's mercy when he plays the three of hearts and forces them to win it and lead to the next trick.

If West takes the heart, he can do no better than lead a diamond, thus restricting South's losers to a heart and a diamond

If East takes the heart, the same result is achieved when he returns a diamond. South follows low and West has the choice, after winning the diamond, of playing a diamond or a heart. In the latter case, South ruffs in dummy and discards the jack of diamonds from his hand.

Actually, declarer can predict a successful outcome, by playing in this manner, as soon as he learns that the trumps are divided 2-1. But to enjoy such a feeling of security, he must embark upon his elimination plan of play very early and not leave anything to luck. (c) King Features Syndicate, Inc.

MARGIE STILES . . . performs blood tests for Richard Bullock.

ANGELA RICHARD . . . is just one of many youngsters receiving care at Health Department stations.

She's Learned The Meaning Of 'Service'

By NANCY HICKS Star Women's Editor

Margie Stiles has spent more than 230 hours this summer taking blood pressures, pricking fingers, weighing and measuring babies and visiting elderly chents in their homes.

And she did it all for free. Her pay is the satisfaction of helping others while learning, plus a college degree.

For Miss Stiles, a nursing student and junior at Iowa Wesleyan College, is fulfilling a college graduation requirement by volunteering her services to others.

Hailed by the ponderous title of "Responsible Social Involvement (RSI)," the six-credit course is similar to other volunteer type programs at universities and colleges. Except that at Iowa Wesleyan it is a requirement for

For her RSI project, Miss Stiles worked in the Lincoln-Lancaster Department of Public Health doing just about everything a public health nurse does - including the piles of

And like the student nurses who receive training at the Health Department, Miss Stiles always had a professional nurse nearby "to fall back on."

Though she got a taste of most facets of the public health field — including a trip to the top of the city-county building to check on air pollution — what Miss Stiles liked best about her job was the people, the nurses and the clients.

The 10 people whom she regularly visits have become her friends, friends that she thinks and cares about even in her off-hours. She also got to know some of the "regulars" at some nursing stations and found them all "different and interesting people."

From these individuals she learned more about working with people. "Everyone is different and you have to be imaginative in how you approach them," said the 20-year-old Lincoln woman.

Her most memorable moments of the summer also revolved around people. She remembers the 15-year-old who fainted during a tetanus shot. Thinking it was her own fault. Miss Stiles was "kind of shook up." But the mother assured her that the girl "faints all the People, she says, are the primary reason she decided to enter the nursing profession. though her own parents' interest may have had some influence. Her father, Jack E. Stiles, an Iowa Wesleyan graduate, is executive director for St. Elizabeth Community Health Center; and her mother, also an Iowa Wesleyan graduate, is a long-time and dedicated volunteer at the Health Department's well baby clinic.

In fact, it was at her mother's suggestion that Miss Stiles first thought about making the Health Department work her RSI for college.

Her father, a trustee for the small college in Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, has nothing but praise for the RSI program. And he admuts to being just a httle envious of this opportunity provided by the school for his daughter and her fellow students.

In his own college days, without the help of the college his fraternity struggled to get a program for retarded children started.

The RSI program at Iowa Wesleyan, first initiated as a college requirement in 1969, works much like a research paper for an advanced

The idea must first be approved by the RSI staff and must fit the guidelines of community involvement, social dynamics and responsible

After the minimum hours of volunteer service are completed, the student writes a documentation, which is screened by her academic adviser.

Finally the documentation is presented in any oral form, play, slides, to a faculty committee for final approval.

In addition to a summer of adventure and service, Miss Stiles, who hopes eventually to get special training at the Burn Treatment Center in Texas, has learned more about nursing and has decided that public health nursing is a neglected area in many schools.

Miss Margaret Royer, director of nursing for the Health Department, agrees. "The public health nurse is in at the grass roots level. Much of the health care today is the crisis-oriented type." The public health nurse can get people into the health care system before the crisis, and can develop a strong program of prevention, said Mrs. Royer.

Prince, the two-month-old white-tailed fawn, almost didn't become a resident of the Lincoln Children's Zoo.

The baby deer was injured in a farmer's field and brought to the zoo by the Game and Parks Commission — in hopes that he 'could be rehabilitated. His hip was crushed, the hide torn from the bone.

So Prince and his new-found playmate, a Pygmy Cameroon goat born with a weak heart. were nursed back to health at ithe home of zoo director, Alan Bietz.

Heller, now an economics professor at the University of Minnesota, advocated a policy of "moderate" restraint. But restraint, he said, should not be allowed to strangle the economy.

Heller was chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under Presidents Kennedy and

Among other measures, he called for "carefully targeted" tax relief for the working poor and increases in personal income tax exemptions, standard deductions and low-income allowances.

Reduction Proposed

He proposed a reduction of $6 billion to $8 billion in personal income and payroll tax revenue. Such a loss of revenue can be made up through tax-reform measures, he said.

"Most of the tax benefit would not pour gasoline on the raging fires of inflation, but rather be fed into a sagging economy characterized by increasing slack and widening areas of excess capacity," Heller said.

He suggested also that the administration begin now to seek an 'economic detente' between business and labor on behalf of the consumer.

Controls Botched

"This won't be easy after the botch the administration made of its late, lamented controls," he said.

"But without some kind of a wage-price monitor and a new of wage-price set guides-backed by powers of inquiry, publicity, suspension and, in outrageous cases, even rollbacks-the outlook for inserting a circuit breaker in the new round of cost-push inflation will remain bleak," he said.

The Joint Economic Com-. mittee is conducting a mid-year examination of the state of the American economy.

modest Gulf Coast home. Pelicans, seagulls, skunks, squirrels, hawks, owls, blue jays, woodpeckers, a falcon and an eagle have taken over the backyard, front yard, living room, porch and bathroom.

Animals Saved

"The idea is to get them well and release them," says Mrs. Collett who has the backing of state and federal wildlife officers in her efforts to save the orphaned creatures - many of them endangered species.

But the blind and the amputees who couldn't survive in the wild become permanent residents.

A great horned owl named Oliver who fell out of a tree has the run of the living room, while Moses, a seven-week-old pelican with broken wings, recuperates in a play pen in the game room.

"I guess the most novel rescue mission was a pelican that had been stoned and was floundering offshore in the Gulf of Mexico. I swam out and finally gave it that could cost up to $50 million mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to to build.

The patients come to Mrs. Collett and her husband, George, at all hours, most through phone calls from friends, strangers, humane society personnel, and veterinarians.

Collett, a retired airline traffic manager, and his wife spend six to seven hours a day cleaning cages, feeding and watering the animals and birds. It costs them about $400 a week and donations help defray expenses.

"I've been called Florida's Mrs. Noah, The Bird Lady, Venice's Dr. Doolittle and a few others I won't mention," says Mrs. Collett. "But we do it because we care."

"But without some kind of a wage-price monitor and a new set of wage-price guides-backed by powers of inquiry, publicity, suspension and, in outrageous cases, even rollbacks-the outlook for inserting a circuit breaker in the new round of cost-push inflation will remain bleak," he said.

pounds of bird seed. The guests are 100 injured wild birds and animals she is nursing back to health in her modest Gulf Coast home.

Pelicans, seagulls, skunks, squirrels, hawks, owls, blue jays, woodpeckers, a falcon and an eagle have taken over the backyard, front yard, living room, porch and bathroom.

During an interview, she hauled a yellow pail of fresh mullet to the backyard and began calling 16 brown pelicans and 11 seagulls by name.

"Here Pedro, come on Goofy, Spunky, chow time," she shouted, as they came bounding off tree stumps that resemble pilings and splashed out of a plastic wading pool where they

"I guess the most novel rescue mission was a pelican that had been stoned and was floundering offshore in the Gulf of Mexico. I swam out and finally gave it that could cost up to $50 million mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to to build.

The patients come to Mrs. Collett and her husband, George, at all hours, most through phone calls from friends, strangers, humane society personnel, and veterinarians.

Collett, a retired airline traffic manager, and his wife spend six to seven hours a day cleaning cages, feeding and watering the animals and birds. It costs them about $400 a week and donations help defray expenses.

"I've been called Florida's Mrs. Noah, The Bird Lady, Venice's Dr. Doolittle and a few others I won't mention," says Mrs. Collett. "But we do it because we care."

U.S. District Judge Warren K. Urbom Thursday denied, at least temporarily, a defense request that presidentlal aide Gen. Alexander Haig be subpeonaed to testify on his role in providing military supplies to federal officers at Wounded Knee.

Fading, But Energy Conservation Still Lingering Encouragement

Omaha (AP) — Remember the energy crisis? Long lines at the gas pumps, fear of insufficient heating fuel supplies and an intensive government effort toward encouraging conservation may have faded with the lifting of the oil embargo, but the effects remain. Many businesses, state authorities and individuals seem to retain the feeling that conservation is a lingering necessity.

One exception to the general feeling may be Mrs. John Burke of Omaha. While she says her family is keeping a "super close" watch on consumption by sweltering slightly in 76 degree temperatures, keeping a close watch on lights in use and foregoing a vacation this year, she also has doubts about the seriousness of the entire situation.

"I think it's a bunch of bul!" she comments, adding that "politics has a lot to do with it (the energy crisis)." She also thinks the government hasn't kept a close enough watch on large consumers of energy and has been directing too much attention toward average consumers.

"But," she concludes, describing herself as apathetic, "I don't have much faith in the government any more anyway."

Mrs. Keith A. Kował of Omaha, says she discovered an enjoyable way to save energy. She and her family dine by candlelight and also use candles in the evening instead of contributing to the electricity

"We found that we enjoyed it very much," last winter, she says, and the practice has continued into the summer months.

The Kowals also traded their Chevelle for a Vega and are enjoying an approximate $3 per week saving in gasoline purchases.

Traffic went down in Nebraska with the energy scare and authorities say it's staying down.

A Nebraska Department of Roads spokesman says statewide traffic at counting stations maintained by the department is down 4% over the first six months of 1974. That situation is generally the same throughout the state, he adds.

And that is causing concern, among other places, in the state department of tourism.

John Rosenow, state tourism director, says tourist traffic may be down as much as 10%. And, he notes, when you consider that well over six million out-ofstate residents traveled through Nebraska in 1972 (the last year in which a comprehensive count is available), that decline amounts to substantial lost revenue for the state.

Tourists and Nebraskans alike may have forgotten about the speed limit, reports Maj. Claude Whitney of the State Patrol. He says troopers see substantial disregard for the 55 m.p.h. speed limit on Interstate 80. However, Whitney adds, the total picture "fluctuates from day to day."

He says motorists generally slow down as the temperatures rise, and speculates that the reason may be concern for the performance and condition

The slowdown may not be for concern for their lives, says Whitney, because the state has seen a dramatic increase in both accident and fatality rates

"It's a problem that has us very concerned at the moment. It's a trend that should not have developed."

Two of Omaha's larger employers say the firms are maintaining their diligence in attempting to conbecause Mutual Chairman V. J. Skutt was convinced a gasoiine shortage was developing. Car pool participation was increased 50% and participation remains at a high level, says the spokesman.

A Union Pacific spokesman says the railroad is maintaining an agressive energy conservation program and refined techniques have enabled the saving of 50,000 gallons of diesel fuel a day throughout the routes of the company. In the Union Pacific building in downtown Omaha, thermostats are up and lighting is down. There has been a 20% cutback in the amount of electricity used in the building since last year, he says.

And both firms intend to maintain the energysaving stance, spokesmen say.

So, while the real crunch may be over, conservation attempts apparently haven't ended for businesses or individuals.

Elimination Of Devil Proposed

"devil" getting increased attention these days as part of a rash of interest in the occult, a Roman Catholic theologian suggests that Christianity eliminate from its teachings all ideas of a personal devil. "True Christianity neither needs nor should it desire such a fallacious prop," says the Rev. Peter J. Riga of St. Mary's College, Moraga, Calif. He says the concept served in ancient times to explain evil influences in the world, and also is used to symbolize that reality in the Bible, but that it makes for confused superstition in terms of modern understanding.

"As we move further into modern history, belief in a personal devil will only prove more and more of an embarassment to true Christianity," he writes in the U.S. Catholic, published in Chicago by the Claretian

Declaring that Christianity is "absolutely removed from all forms of magic and superstition," which are being generated by interest in the occult, he adds:

"For that reason we ought to remove from Christianity every vestige of belief in devils — at least as truly personal entities and the forms of rites of exorcism to drive out the devil.

"We may certainly keep the traditional language to express symbolically the reality of sin and evil, but in our catechesis (teaching) it ought to be understood as a symbol." Father Riga, a prolific author and lecturer, says that in many ways the idea of a persnal devil nowadays can be damaging and, in a sense contradicts basic Christian

"It seems to serve as an escape from human responsibility by attributing our predicament to forces over which we have no control," he says. (There's a common phrase for it, "The devil made me do it.")

"This seems to contradict the more basic Christian teaching of man's freedom under the grace of God, whereby man can determine his own destiny, for better or worse," Father Riga says.

He says that although the Bible includes many references to angels and devils, modern Scripture study indicates they are not necessarily "personal entities" and "probably are symbolic of reality." As for the account of Christ's threefold temptation by the "devil," Father Riga says scholars disagree about whether it involved a "personal entity called the 'devil," or whether it is a story to "emphasize the fact that Christ was truly a man, tempted by the three fundamental lusts which afflict all men: material goods, self-esteem before men, power over the lives of others." He says belief in a personal devil has "never officially been defined by the church." although the idea was used in the past to portray many afflictions now understood as having

Ballot Will List Chamber's Name

By The Associated Press Sec. of State Allen Beermann

Thursday ordered the name of Omaha State Sen. Ernest Chambers placed on the November ballot as an independent candidate for governor, and said the outcome of a petition drive to put a state aid to education bill before the voters will be known sometime next week.

Beermann's order shows Chambers with a total of 3.480 signatures; 2,028 were verified as valid.

Chambers' name will appear on the ballot with those of Gov. J. James Exon and his Republican opponent, State Sen. Richard Marvel of Hastings, and their respective running mates.

No 'Exon' Allowed On Highway Signs

It's all right to post Interstate Highway signs hailing "Nebraska — The Good Life," a federal engineer said Wednesday, but it appears that identification of Gov. J. James Exon has got to go.

Ray Hogrefe, Nebraska division engineer for the Federal Highway Administration, said a new regulation appeared to bar the use of a governor's name on signs installed on the super highway. But he said he wanted to get a specific ruling from superiors before banning use of the governor's name on new signs. Signs already up will not

No 'Exon' Allowed On Highway Signs

It's all right to post Interstate Highway signs hailing "Nebraska - The Good Life," a federal engineer said Wednesday, but it appears that identification of Gov. J.

Ray Hogrefe, Nebraska division engineer for the Federal Highway Administration, said a new regulation appeared to bar the use of a governor's name on signs installed on the super highway. But he said he wanted to get a specific ruling from superiors before banning use of the governor's name on new signs. Signs already up will not be changed, he said.

Hogrefe said the matter of using the governor's name on the signs had nothing to do with the recent dispute between the FHA and Nebraska over use of tourism signs along the interstate. Nebraska went to court recently in

Snead, Heard, Regalado Tied

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — Victor Regalado, a little-known tour sophomore from Mexico, sank a long putt for par on the last hole to salvage a 68 and a share of the first-round lead Thursday in the $200,000 Pleasant Valley Golf Classic.

The 26-year-old Regalado, twice the Mexican Masters champion but never before a serious challenger in the United Statwes, was tied at three-under-par with Jerry Heard and J.C. Snead, each just back from an extended vacation.

Dave Hill, also fresh from a three-week break, toured the 7,-119-yard Pleasant Valley Country Club course in 69 and was alone at that figure-one shot back in the chase for a $40,000

The group at 70-and the only others to break par 71 on the long, tough layout-included Larry Hinson, Jim Marshall and Lee Elder, the runnerup in this tournament each of the last two years when it was known as the USI Classic.

Lanny Wadkins, the defending champion, bogeyed the last hole for a 72 and Tom Weiskopf had a 71.

Many of the game's great names-including Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino, Gary Player, Arnold Palmer, Johnny Miller and U. S. Open champion Hale Irwin are skipping this tournament that immediately procedes next week's PGA national championship.

Heard and Snead, neither of whom had played in a month, were in the clubhouse with their 68s when Regalado put his second shot over the green on his final hole, chipped back poorly and was faced with an 18-foot par-saving putt to keep a share of the lead.

He made it.

"The putting was the difference," said Regalado, who joined the American tour in 1973 and hasn't made expenses. His best finish last year was a tie for 14th and he Lasn't been in the

Sooners Picked To Win Big 8

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) Oklahoma is the overwhelming favorite to win the 1974 Big Eight football championship, according to a Big Eight poll of sports writers and sportcasters.

The conference office said the Sooners polled 138 firstplace votes in the 1-4 ballots. Nebraska received five first place votes, and Colorado took one.

Behind Oklahoma, the poll indicated Nebraska would finish second and Missouri third. Colorado was fourth, Oklahoma State fifth, Kansas sixth, Iowa State seventh and Kansas State last.

The poll has forecast the conference champion only 17 of 28 times since 1946.

NFL Negotiations Fall Apart Again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiations in the National Football League labor dispute broke down again Thursday and were recessed until next Tuesday because "an agreement can't be consummated at this time.'

W. J. Usery Jr., chief federal mediator, said he had asked both the NFL's striking players and the owners to reevaluate their positions and "be prepared to bargain in good faith."

Usery said that he had hoped to be able to get the two parties to agree to a new contract before the playing of the first preseason game Friday night.

But it became apparent that would not happen and so he recessed the negotiations until next week with the hope that an agreement could be reached before the second weekend of

Meanwhile, the NFL Management Council said the 300th veteran reported to camp Friday when running back Bob Hudson crossed the picket lines and rejoined the Oakland Raiders. Of the 300, 87 were starters last year.

The federal mediator, who had kept the parties negotiating for 14 hours on Wednesday, said the NFL Players Association had submitted its proposals and that there had been an exchange of views but that "there are still a lot of issues, major differences, outstanding, and we are hopeful that they can be bargained.'

He said the owners had made no written counter-proposal but that they had discussed the union's demands in detail.

"We still have a difference of opinion . . . They are far apart on many issues,"

Bill Curry of the Houston Oilers, president of the union, told newsmen after the talks broke off that the players association believes the owners are not taking their demands seriously.

"We're told that our proposals are not satisfactory, that they are not serious enough," Curry said. "We were told to go back and rethink them. I think it's time for the owners to begin taking us seriously.'

The players association announced it would hold a news conference Friday morning to discuss in detail its proposals and recap the last four days of negotiations.

Wellington Mara, owner of the New York Giants and chairman of the owners' council, said the players' latest proposal, which he said was made Wednesday night, "does not present a basis for further negotiations at this time.

"This document on its face merited instant rejection," Mara said. "But because of our deep concern and our abiding respect for the 1,200 NFL players, we have pondered it long and "We're no closer on the issues than we were when they submitted the original demands on March 16," Mara said. He went down each of the 13 "freedom demands" made by the players then and said that there had been no changes in most of them and only minor modifications in the others. "Whether we are right or wrong," Mara said,

"we are totally convinced the players association is not willing to bargain on the freedom issues" because, he believes, they are trying to protect the status of an antitrust lawsuit filed in May 1972. It was understood that the players modified

some of their freedom demands but it could not be learned whether such key proposals as elimination of the reserve and option clauses and end of the Rozelle compensation rule were

Confidence Keys Aunt Priscilla Hopes For W Falstaff Victory

By BOB MOYER

Confidence was the key Thursday night as Falstaff rallied to defeat Stan's Lounge, 4-2, at Ballard Field in a crucial Lincoln AAA Fast Pitch Softball League game.

The win moved the league-leading Falstaff team to a 22-8 mark and dropped Stan's Lounge to third place with a 20-9 record. Dean Brothers is second with a 21-9 log in the 21-game

"This team plays like my old King's teams," said manager Bill Ketterer, "They have the confidence those teams used to have. Look at tonight, they got behind 2-0 and didn't quit."

It was a rewarding win for Falstaff after they had blown a 4-1 lead Thursday night to Dean Brothers, losing 5-4.

In a pitching duel between Lefty Sheary of Falstaff and Doyle Leroy of Stan's, the Loungers took the upper hand by scoring runs in the fourth and fifth on an RBI double by Bill Hannor and base hit by Randy Calfee which produced a run when centerfielder Duane Eichorn let the ball go by him to the wall and then Sheary couldn't catch the ball in the cutoff position for another error.

With Leroy looking sharp through the first five innings, fanning eight, Falstaff looked like they might be out of it.

But with two down in the sixth, Leroy walked Eichorn and Dan Cook unloaded a home run that barely cleared the left field

Then in the top of the seventh, Stan's manager, Ernie Thomas lifted Lerov with a 1-1 count on Jim Smith. Reliever John Jackson got Smith to ground out and then got Sheary to fly out but then walked leadoff hitter Rick Boals.

That brought up Tom Novak who hit a long fly to the left field wall that nestled in and out of the glove of outfielder Don Heldt, scoring Boals with the winning run. Bill Slaughter then slashed a double to give Sheary an insurance run.

Manager Ketterer who usually alternates Sheary and Jay Phipps in each game, elected to go the route with Sheary and the 41-year-old lefthander responded with a steady five-hitter. "We had changed a couple of times," Ketterer noted. "It

Queen's Turn, who sprinted to a six-length verdict in the Inaugural, will undoubtedly be used as a "rabbit" to draw the early speed in the test, thereby permitting Patsy's Reign a chance to display her rallying specialities.

Patsy has earned $29,705 this season on two wins, five seconds and four thirds in 13 outings.

The triumph atoned for a half-length loss Foreign Intent suffered to Paul Kemling's Roman Doc here last Saturday in the State Fair Handicap.

The victory on Foreign Intent was one of three for Ecoffey, who moved within three points of dislodging Rodolfo Calderon from the top of the Lincoln jockey standings.

Ecoffey scored earlier on Terry Chaffee's Harrad ($3.60) in the third race and later on John Truescott, et al's Florida Rose ($18.00) in the eighth race. Florida Rose had to await a claim of foul by Randall Meier, jockey on Robb's Foy, which finished second. The claim was found to be invalid.

Reitz' shot into the left center gap, his third hit of the night, scored Joe Torre who had doubled and Ted Simmons who had been walked intentionally to snap a 2-2 tie. Mike Tyson singled to drive in Reitz with the final run.

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — Victor Regalado, a little-known tour sophomore from Mexico, sank a long putt for par on the last hole to salvage a 68 and a share of the first-round lead Thursday in the $200,000 Pleasant Valley Golf Classic.

The 26-year-old Regalado, twice the Mexican Masters champion but never before a serious challenger in the United Statwes, was tied at three-under-par with Jerry Heard and J.C. Snead, each just back from an extended vacation.

Dave Hill, also fresh from a three-week break, toured the 7,-119-yard Pleasant Valley Country Club course in 69 and was alone at that figure-one shot back in the chase for a $40,000

The group at 70-and the only others to break par 71 on the long, tough layout-included Larry Hinson, Jim Marshall and Lee Elder, the runnerup in this tournament each of the last two years when it was known as the USI Classic.

Lanny Wadkins, the defending champion, bogeyed the last hole for a 72 and Tom Weiskopf had a 71.

Heard and Snead, neither of whom had played in a month, were in the clubhouse with their 68s when Regalado put his second shot over the green on his final hole, chipped back poorly and was faced with an 18-foot par-saving putt to keep a share of the lead.

"The putting was the difference," said Regalado, who joined the American tour in 1973 and hasn't made expenses. His best finish last year was a tie for 14th and he hasn't been in the top 20 this year.

He got off to a fast start, holing putts of 25 and 35 feet for birdies on his first two holes, got a share of the lead when he punched a nine iron less than a foot from the cup on his 17th then saved it with the crucial par on the last.

Sooners Picked To Win Big 8

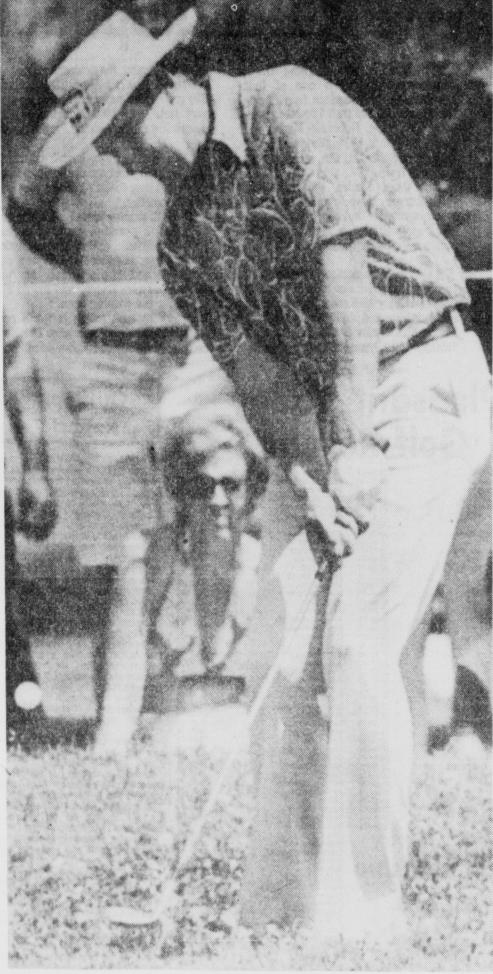

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) - Oklahoma is the overwhelming favorite to win the 1974 Big Eight football championship, according to a Big Eight poll of sports writers and sportcasters.

The conference office said the Sooners polled 138 firstplace votes in the 1-4 ballots. Nebraska received five first place votes, and Colorado took one.

Behind Oklahoma, the poll indicated Nebraska would finish second and Missouri third. Colorado was fourth, Oklahoma State fifth, Kansas sixth, Iowa State seventh and Kansas State last.

The poll has forecast the conference champion only 17 of 28 times since 1946.

NFL Negotiations Fall Apart Again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiations in the National Football League labor dispute broke down again Thursday and were recessed until next Tuesday because "an agreement can't be consummated at this time.

W. J. Usery Jr., chief federal mediator, said he had asked both the NFL's striking players and the owners to reevaluate their positions and "be prepared to bargain in good faith."

Usery said that he had hoped to be able to get the two parties to agree to a new contract before the playing of the first preseason game Friday night.

But it became apparent that would not happen and so he recessed the negotiations until next week with the hope that an agreement could be reached before the second weekend of

Meanwhile, the NFL Management Council said the 300th veteran reported to camp Friday when running back Bob Hudson crossed the picket lines and rejoined the Oakland Raiders. Of the 300, 87 were starters last year.

The federal mediator, who had kept the parties negotiating for 14 hours on Wednesday, said the NFL Players Association had submitted its proposals and that there had been an exchange of views but that "there are still a lot of issues, major differences, outstanding, and we are hopeful that they can be bargained.

He said the owners had made no written counter-proposal but that they had discussed the union's demands in detail.

"We still have a difference of opinion . . . They are far apart on many issues,"

Bill Curry of the Houston Oilers, president of the union, told newsmen after the talks broke off that the players association believes the owners are not taking their demands seriously. "We're told that our proposals are not satisfactory, that they are not serious enough." Curry said. "We were told to go back and rethink them. I think it's time for the owners to begin taking us seriously.

The players association announced it would hold a news conference Friday morning to discuss in detail its proposals and recap the last four days of negotiations.

Wellington Mara, owner of the New York Giants and chairman of the owners' council, said the players' latest proposal, which he said was made Wednesday night, "does not present a basis for further negotiations at this time.

"This document on its face merited instant rejection," Mara said. "But because of our deep concern and our abiding respect for the 1,200 NFL players, we have pondered it long and

"We're no closer on the issues than we were when they submitted the original demands on March 16," Mara said.

He went down each of the 13 "freedom demands" made by the players then and said that there had been no changes in most of them and only minor modifications in the others.

"Whether we are right or wrong," Mara said, "we are totally convinced the players association is not willing to bargain on the freedom issues" because, he believes, they are trying to protect the status of an antitrust lawsuit filed in May 1972.

It was understood that the players modified some of their freedom demands but it could not be learned whether such key proposals as elimination of the reserve and option clauses and end of the Rozelle compensation rule were among the revisions.

Confidence Keys Falstaff Victory

By BOB MOYER

Confidence was the key Thursday night as Falstaff rallied to defeat Stan's Lounge, 4-2, at Ballard Field in a crucial Lincoln AAA Fast Pitch Softball League game.

The win moved the league-leading Falstaff team to a 22-8 mark and dropped Stan's Lounge to third place with a 20-9 record. Dean Brothers is second with a 21-9 log in the 21-game

'This team plays like my old King's teams," said manager Bill Ketterer, "They have the confidence those teams used to have. Look at tonight, they got behind 2-0 and didn't quit."

It was a rewarding win for Falstaff after they had blown a 4-

1 lead Thursday night to Dean Brothers, losing 5-4. In a pitching duel between Lefty Sheary of Falstaff and Doyle Leroy of Stan's, the Loungers took the upper hand by scoring runs in the fourth and fifth on an RBI double by Bill Hannor and base hit by Randy Calfee which produced a run when centerfielder Duane Eichorn let the ball go by him to the wall and then Sheary couldn't catch the ball in the cutoff position for another error.

With Leroy looking sharp through the first five innings, fanning eight, Falstaff looked like they might be out of it. But with two down in the sixth, Leroy walked Eichorn and

Championship Alterations Considered

NEW YORK (UPI) — Baseball officials will consider three possible changes of the league championship series at next week's Summer meetings here it was announced Thursday by the Commissioner's office

The meetings will be held Aug 7-8 and if any one of the changes is adopted it would take effect no later than 1976 Basically, each of the revisions would add two teams in each league to the post-season competition and would necessi tate two rounds of playoffs similar to football and basketball, before determining the participants in the World Series

The first format change would include the second place team in each division. The second place club would play the winner in the other division in a series not to exceed three out of five The winner of these playoffs would then meet for the League Championship in three out of five

The second format would add the teams with the highest winning percentage regardless of their standings to the four division winners. Winners of these playoffs would then play each other in a three out of five series for the League Championship

The third format would split the present division of six teams - Eddie Polland of Ireland fired in each league into three divisions of four teams in each league. The winners of each division would be joined by the second place team with the highest winning percentage for the playoff series not to exceed three out of five games Winners of these playoffs would then play each other in a three out of five series for the League Championship

The greens are in excellent condition and very fast," said Miss McKenna of the links a few miles from the Pacific Ocean.

"This course plays long," said Mrs. Sander. "They told me the par fives were short, but they haven't been playing that way in practice."

The U.S. women scored a 10-8 victory in 1972 at Ayrshire, Scotland. Great Britain's Michelle Walker, the only undefeated player on either side that year, has since turned professional, as has America's Laura Baugh, who scored 21/2 points for the winning team.

Victory in each match is worth one point. If a match is even after 18 holes, each team is awarded half a point.

Southeast Loses Diver

Lincoln Southeast High School is losing one of it's girl divers this fall but is gaining a gal golfer.

She is 17-year-old Jane Deeter, who will be one of the favorites in next week's Nebraska Junior Girls Golf Tournament at the Lincoln Country Club.

Miss Deeter has been a diver for Southeast, but since the school will start a girl's golf team and since both sports are played in the fall, she had to make a choice and it was golf. The daughter of Eugene A. and Jackie Deeter, Jane also is a tennis player for Southeast. Asked if she was good at it, she said, "I play, let's put it that way." Golf, however, is another story. She's playing very well this summer and that, coupled with the fact LCC is her home course, makes her a top choice in next week's tournament. She was runnerup in the first flight of the recent Nebraska State Women's Golf Championship at the Omaha Country Club, losing to 1972 champion Bunnie Phillips, formerly of Norfolk but now a resident of Omaha.

Misses Title Flight

It took an 87 to get into a playoff for one spot in the championship flight, but Jane shot an 88.

She came back in the first round to shoot an 80, which would have made her runnerup for medalist honors had it come a day earlier.

All she needed to do for a 77 in that round was to par the 18th hole, but she took a seven.

The match was over and I was in a hurry," she said after she had disposed of Mrs. Robert Blank of Omaha, 6 and 5. "I hit into the sand trap and took two to get out. Then in my haste I three putted."

In her 6 and 5 victory over Susie Coyne of Omaha in the second round she was four over par.

Jane defeated Elizabeth Weekes of South Sioux City in the semifinals, 5 and 3. Miss Weekes will be here next week to try again and she feels she has "just about as hood a chance as anybody" to win the tournament.

Miss Deeter figures there'll be a lot of other girls capable of winning. She mentioned Val Skinner, 13-year-old from North Platte, Kathy Morrisey of Syracuse, and Theresa Wanek of Omaha, who gave Mrs. Christie Travnicek such a battle in the first round of the championship flight at Omaha.

Pro-Ladies Friday

The Nebraska Women's Amateur Golf Association will participate in a Pro-Ladies tournament Friday at the Lincoln Country Club. The one-day affair is limited to the first 28 teams applying.

The women's group also is looking forward to the first Best Ball (Handicap) Partners' Tournament scheduled for Aug. 12, 13, 14 at the Kearney Country Club course. The field there will be limited to the first 66 teams entered.

Looking back at last week's state tourney in Omaha it is interesting to note that three names have been prominent in the event every year but three since 1957.

Mrs. Jean Hyland, winner this year, has been champion five times and runnerup four times.

Mrs. Dorothy Schwartzkopf has won four titles and been second four times while her daughter, Mrs. Christie Travnicek is a tour-time winner and a three-time runnerup

Congratulations to all three for keeping their games at such high peaks for such a long period of time.

Vote To Go To Council

private support has been gathered. And Monday it will be up to city lawmakers to get the ball rolling.

For on that day the council is slated to take its first formal action designating the much talked about Centrum block as eligible for redevelopment.

A proposed resolution will be presented to the council declaring that the area, from 11th to 12th, N to O, meets the substandard and blighted test laid down in state redevelopment statutes.

The evidence is a building study report prepared by city consultants Barton-Aschman. That report shows that 65% of the structures in that block are substandard and blighted.

Officials in four major agriculture states have estimated the Southwest and Midwest drought has already resulted in an estimated $5.6 billion in crop losses.

Two other states reported up to one third of their multi-million-acre corn and soybean crops

"As the situation intensifies . . . we're not just talking about farmers," said Les Boone, an agronomist at the University of Illinois. "We're also talking about the general population. Most people don't realize this situation also affects the food situation . . . especially the cattle market."

"As of now, production will probably be off 25 to 30%," Boone said of Illinois. "It could get worse. It will get worse if the drought persists . . . some fields are already damaged . . . to the extent that rain won't help them much."

Illinois normally produces 10 million acres of

His counterpart, Stephanie Mills, a Berkeley, Calif., writer and crusader against population growth, wore a plum-colored dress printed with lush branches of cherries for the occasion and said choosing to remain childless was a form of self-respect.

Voluntary Resignation

In his formal statement, Remecke, 50, said the "office of heutenant governor will never have to be varated through legal action by the state. I will voluntarily resign prior to such an action being necessary."

Later in the day, an expressionless Reinecke summoved newsmen to his office and read another statement which said, "I will resign if my judgment is ever entered." He

But the upswing failed to attract any support, and prices yielded again to the pressures of concern over inflation, high interest rates, impeachment and the other issues on Wall Street's long list of woes.

The market got little news to stimulate it one way or another during the session. After the close, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York reported that business loans at 12 major New York banks registered a relatively mild $25 million increase in the week ended Wednesday.

Investors have put particular emphasis on the weekly loan data in the last couple of months as they looked for signs of an easing in upward pressure on interest rates.

But it remained to be seen how Wall Street would respond to the latest statistics. Last week, when the Fed reported the first decline in business loans in seven weeks, the market seemed to shrug off the news

Midwest, Southwest Crop Markets...Business Losses Near $5.6 Billion

By United Press International

Officials in four major agriculture states have estimated the Southwest and Midwest drought has already resulted in an estimated $5.6 billion in

Two other states reported up to one third of their multi-million-acre corn and soybean crops destroyed

Texas officials reported $2 billion in crop losses, Kansas $1 billion, Iowa $1.6 billion and Nebraska $1 billion. Illinois and Ohio experts said that up to one third of their corn and sovbean crops are already lost — and things could get

"As the situation intensifies . . . we're not just talking about farmers," said Les Boone, an agronomist at the University of Illinois. "We're also talking about the general population. Most people don't realize this situation also affects the food situation . . . especially the cattle market."

"As of now, production will probably be off 25 to 30%," Boone said of Illinois. "It could get worse. It will get worse if the drought persists . . . some fields are already damaged . . . to the extent that rain won't help them much." Illinois normally produces 10 million acres of corn and 8 million acres of soybeans.

Irreversible Losses

Iowa Agriculture Secretary Robert Lounseberry said as much as 30% of his state's corn and soybean crops were considered to be losses — irreversible losses at this stage of crop

Red Barn Loses Billboard Lures

Outstate Nebraska Bureau Goehner - Vic Bartlett figures it had to happen sooner or later. Two of his best advertisers recently bit the dust.

"Thirsty?" the signs beckoned. "Bartlett's Red Barn, just 1/2 mile."

For at least seven years, the 20- by 40-foot signs lured travel-weary tourists off the Interstate highway to the local tavern and restaurant, the Red

Although the monthly rental was $128, Bartlett said the signs more than paid for themselves. Signs Came Down

About five weeks ago, construction workers from Omaha lowered the sign for the westbound lanes. The signs in the eastbound lanes came down

The signs had to come down eventually, Bartlett said, because state law bans billboards for 660 feet either side of the Interstate. He said he is considering erecting a giant 40- by 80-foot sign 600 feet from the highway but the cost is prohibitive.

"It's a little too early to tell, but I think it really has hurt my business," Bartlett said. "They were awfully inviting, weren't they?" An outdated sign at the edge of town gives the population as 106, but Bartlett counts between 135 and 150 noses in Goehner, including the college

A quiet, rustic town with dirt and gravel streets, Goehner is about 30 miles west of Lincoln, and just a hop, skip and jump from Interstate 80.

Bartlett, who took over the business shortly after his father died in 1962, said he could see potential in the rejuvenated, one-time hotel . . . especially since the Interstate was on the drawing

'We've got a unique situation here," he said. "Between Omaha and North Platte, we're the only town that really touches the highway.

75% Vacationers

During the summer months, from mid-June to Labor Day, Bartlett figures about 75% of his business is from vacationers.

He admitted he is a little worried about business this summer, what with the energy crisis and his signs coming down.

"I still get quite a few tourists," he said, "particularly repeat customers. One couple from Galesburg, Ill., hasn't missed stopping here the last tive years. It's a going and coming proposition everytime they go out to Denver."

First-timers to the Red Barn may be greeted by a grinning, mustachioed Bartlett who ushers them to his guest book resting on the end of the

"It's amazing what the Interstate carries as far as foreigners. Well, anybody for that matter," he said, thumbing through the yellowing pages. He pointed out signers from nearly every state in the nation, Japan, Syria, India. Canada and the Ivory

"There are quite a few philosophers and some pretty good artists. It's kinda like looking through an old high school yearbook, isn't it?"

Of course not everybody signs, but 90% do, he

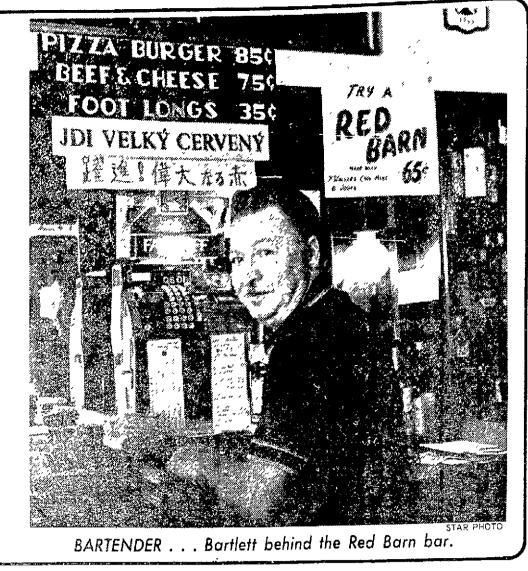

"One fellow said, 'Hell no, I don't want anybody to know I was in a joint like this," Bartlett recalled. "I think he was joking." One Bad Experience

For his dozen years of tending bar, Bartlett said he remembers only one bad experience and that was just last year.

"That couple that killed the State Trooper at Lexington stopped through here about three hours before the trooper was killed and bought a cold sixpack," he said. "They stood at the end of the bar and talked to a customer and myself for maybe five

"They didn't act peculiar whatsoever," he said. "The girl was kind of giggly, that's all.

"It kind of gives me the chills. They could have pulled a gun on me just as easy."

All groundwater supplies in Nebraska are dependent on precipitation for replenishment either directly or indirectly, he

Precipitation that replemshes shallow wells in fine-textured soil first infiltrates through the soil until it reaches an impervious or semi-impervious formation such as heavy clay or shale, Azthelm explained. The water for all practical purposes goes although it may slowly move laterally down the slope to points of discharge, he added.

'A shallow well receives the water from storage, and as long as there is free water in the materials around the well, the well will continue to yield," he said. The movement of water becomes less and less toward the well as drought progresses. Finally, the water movement ceases, and the well yields so little that for practical purposes it is dry ' Axthelm recommended that Cautioned Axthelm, "A dry well can be expected to stay dry for some period of time even after rains occur. The soil during droughts is so dry that when rains do come, free water may not be available to percolate toward the well. Council Bluffs (UPI) - Coun- work of the victim with records cil Bluffs authorities late Thursday continued their efforts to identify the body of a man found Wednesday on the Iowa side of the Missouri River near the South Omaha Bridge. Council Bluffs Police Chief

Nick Sulentic said the body was hadly detenorated and had been in the river for some time before it was recovered. He said the victim was believed to be an Omaha man, but authorities were waiting to release the name pending final confirmation.

Pottawattamie County Medical Examiner Dr. Samuel Rosa was attempting to match the jaws and teeth of the victim with x-rays and work done on an Omaha man at Creighton University.

Sulentic said the man's fingerprints were "pretty badly deteriorated" and authorities hoped to make a positive identification by matching dental of a man at the Creighton University Dental Department.

Barn Loses Billboard

Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Goehner - Vic Bartlett figures it had to happen sooner or later. Two of his best advertisers recently bit the dust.

"Thirsty?" the signs beckoned. "Bartlett's Red Barn, just 1/2 mile.

For at least seven years, the 20- by 40-foot signs lured travel-weary tourists off the Interstate highway to the local tavern and restaurant, the Red Barn.

Although the monthly rental was $128, Bartlett said the signs more than paid for themselves. Signs Came Down

About five weeks ago, construction workers from Omaha lowered the sign for the westbound lanes. The signs in the eastbound lanes came down two weeks ago.

The signs had to come down eventually, Bartlett said, because state law bans billboards for 660 feet either side of the Interstate. He said he is considering erecting a giant 40- by 80-foot sign 600 feet from the highway but the cost is prohibitive.

'It's a little too early to tell, but I think it really has hurt my business," Bartlett said. "They were awfully inviting, weren't they?'

An outdated sign at the edge of town gives the population as 106, but Bartlett counts between 135 and 150 noses in Goehner, including the college streets, Goehner is about 30 miles west of Lincoln, and just a hop, skip and jump from Interstate 80.

Bartlett, who took over the business shortly after his father died in 1962, said he could see potential in the rejuvenated, one-time hotel . . . especially since the Interstate was on the drawing boards.

'We've got a unique situation here," he said. "Between Omaha and North Platte, we're the only town that really touches the highway.

75% Vacationers During the summer months, from mid-June to Labor Day, Bartlett figures about 75% of his business is from vacationers.

He admitted he is a little worried about business this summer, what with the energy crisis and his signs coming down.

"I still get quite a few tourists," he said, "particularly repeat customers. One couple from Galesburg, Ill., hasn't missed stopping here the last five years. It's a going and coming proposition everytime they go out to Denver.'

First-timers to the Red Barn may be greeted by a grinning, mustachioed Bartlett who ushers them to his guest book resting on the end of the

'It's amazing what the Interstate carries as far as foreigners. Well, anybody for that matter," he said, thumbing through the yellowing pages. He pointed out signers from nearly every state in the nation, Japan, Syria, India, Canada and the Ivory

'There are quite a few philosophers and some pretty good artists. It's kinda like looking through an old high school yearbook, isn't it?"

Of course not everybody signs, but 90% do, he

'One fellow said, 'Hell no, I don't want anybody to know I was in a joint like this,' Bartlett recalled. "I think he was joking." One Bad Experience

For his dozen years of tending bar, Bartlett said he remembers only one bad experience and that was just last year.

'That couple that killed the State Trooper at Lexington stopped through here about three hours before the trooper was killed and bought a cold sixpack," he said. "They stood at the end of the bar and talked to a customer and myself for maybe five

'They didn't act peculiar whatsoever," he said. "The girl was kind of giggly, that's all. It kind of gives me the chills. They could have pulled a gun on me just as easy."

Some farmers in the fivecounty area, which includes York, Hamilton, Fillmore, Clay and Seward counties, are already experiencing severe declines in underground water supplies.

That is what we should be doing, rather than trying to make it rain, and have the rain end up in the wrong places." Glock said he was speaking for himself and not for the group he heads.

(D 1974 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand comer of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you. Oking Features Syndicate, Inc., 1974. World rights reserved.
